SHELTER MEDICINE SYMPOSIUM: Building Community Health

April 25th, 2009

Center for Companion Animal Health
School of Veterinary Medicine
University of California
One Shields Avenue
Davis, CA 95616

We live in a society that increasingly expects better care for homeless, displaced and abused animals. To meet this demand, veterinarians are working more and more with animal shelters, rescue groups, foster homes and adopted animals. Whether you are in private practice or working with a shelter, this symposium will bring you cutting edge information from leading experts about how to protect and improve the health of our most vulnerable patients.

Symposium attendees will receive continuing education credits along with bound symposium proceedings.

Continental breakfast and catered lunch will be provided.
